

September 11, 2009

"Let the little children come to Me, and don't stop them, because the kingdom of God belongs to such as these," Luke 18:16b

What do they have in common?

Volleyball, high school English class and grits—can you see what they have in common? I couldn't. I like a couple of them and I've never liked one. No, I'm not tellin' which one.

In Eastern Hungary, Journeyman A.P. Crouch is coaching a high school volleyball team. She loves playing the game and talking with her players off the court. She trains them to "be all that they can be."

Maybe you haven't heard the word, Journeyman, before. Journeymen are young college graduates who are living all over the world. They are obeying God and going places to tell others about Jesus.

Another Journeyman, Holly McMickle, teaches high school English in Eastern Hungary. She is looking forward to spending time with her students just like A.P. Crouch will with her volleyball players. Holly is going to have an all-American breakfast party for her students. Are you getting the connection yet?

Holly is going to serve her students pancakes and cheese grits, and she might even invite A.P. Crouch to join them. Yep, in Eastern Hungary, volleyball, high school English class and grits DO go together.

Please pray for A.P. Crouch and Holly McMickle. Ask God to help them share the love of Jesus with their students. And pray that their students will become Christians.

<http://kompray.imb.org>