

October 30, 2009

"Let the little children come to Me, and don't stop them, because the kingdom of God belongs to such as these," Luke 18:16b

Working with dad

We attended our Parent-Teacher Conference at school this morning. And, that means no school for the rest of the day. I know what I want to do...go with my dad to visit the guys in the Nairobi Business as Mission ministry.

I like being around the guys and visiting with them and doing things with them. There are ten of them who work in leather crafting four days a week. The rest of the week they spent their time with their Bible storying groups and telling the good news in their communities.

Today I worked with the guys in the shop. We have several Christmas projects we are working on. Today, I helped put ornamental strings on beaded leather Christmas ornaments. It was harder to do than you think. The strings are small and it's not easy to tie the knots. The guys asked a lot of questions about what was happening at school and I was glad to visit with them.

I have to return to school tomorrow and I will miss them. I pray that their groups go well this week and many visitors come to the groups to hear the Bible stories. ERIN, age 12 (Sub-Saharan African peoples)

<http://kompray.imb.org>